The three mile race at the roller rink on Tuesday night between four young ladies of this city brought out a large crowd who anxiously waited until the time should arrive for the trial of speed. At 9 o'clock the floor was cleared of skaters and the ladies who were to race were arranged in line and started off at the word "go." Miss Emma Weber had evidently made up her mind to "get to the front" and such a thing was possible, and accordingly when the word was given she made a bold dash and succeeded in getting the lead, which she kept during the entire race, making the three miles in 14 minutes. Her sister Miss Tillie Weber was close behind, but by a misstep she lost when the race was nearly ended, thus losing a half-lap.

The Castleton troupe which played here this week had a little fun at Winnipeg, as will be seen by the following telegram which appeared in the dailies on Monday: "The performance of Kate Castleton's company in the opera house here last night was interrupted by an outbreak on the part of Harry Phillips, Kate's husband and the manager. He obtained possession of the money sent from San Francisco and got drunk. At the close of the first act Kate kicked him for the remainder of the money. He responded by felling her with a blow which rendered her insensible for some time. At the hotel afterwards he broke into her room, revolver in hand threatening to kill her. He was arrested and spent the night in the police station. Seven thousand dollars worth of Miss Castleton's diamonds were found on his person and returned to her. Phillips was bailed out and the whole company left to-night."

A dispatch from Fergus Falls on Wednesday says: "Kate Castleton played here last night to a large house. This morning before departing for Brainerd she made a division of the cash on hand between herself and husband and told him to go his way and she and the company would go theirs. The husband failed to keep his word and at that light and refused to order his compromise between the two was eventually made and the separation did not take place. This was the culmination of the fuss that started at Winnipeg."

The A. C. C. The ladies of the A. C. C. met as previously announced at the residence of Mrs. H. H. Barber for their second dinner. To say that it was a very enjoyable affair but poorly expressed the good time that all seemed to have. It was apparent from the first that it would be even more of a success than the previous dinner, because each one knew their duties better and all appeared in uniform which added greatly to the harmony of the affair. Mrs. Barnham and Mrs. Kindred waited on the table while the other members partook of the dinner, and afterwards they were waited upon by all the ladies present. The bill of fare was as follows: Soup..... Mrs. H. H. Barber Fish..... Mrs. Frank Barnham Fried Oysters..... Mrs. H. H. Barber Chicken Salad..... Miss Mabel White Cold Slaw..... Mrs. C. E. Smith Tea and Coffee..... Mrs. G. H. Hartley Cream and sugar..... Miss Aggie Mulrine Butter..... Mrs. Ed. Hazen Cakes..... Mrs. C. F. Kindred Bread..... Miss Guest and Mrs. J. C. Rosser Cookies..... Mrs. A. V. Snyder

The next meeting will be a tea at Mrs. C. E. Smith's on Fourth street north, on Wednesday, February 4th.

An Interesting Case. On Monday and Tuesday the preliminary examination of W. C. Cattell on the charge of obtaining the signature of C. B. Sleeper to a note of $900 by false representation was in progress before Judge Douglas. W. A. Fleming appeared for the defense, and Col. Sleeper for the prosecution. After hearing the case Mr. Douglas concluded that there was sufficient cause to bind him over to the mercy of the grand jury and fixed his bond at $500, which was unable to procure that evening and he was committed to the night with Sheriff Mertz. The next day, Thursday, however, the following named gentlemen signed the bond and he was liberated: Carl Douglas, F. A. B. King, George Forsyth, J. C. Rosser, S. Walker, Dan Smith, T. C. Byrnes, Geo. Holland and S. P. Fleming.

Until sometime in the fall Mr. Cattell held the position of freight agent at this point and has heretofore borne a good name and the case has attracted considerable attention. Since this matter has been made public many other things have been brought to the surface and have been the subject of much discussion, which, if true, will make a bad showing against the gentleman in question, but inasmuch as he has heretofore had a spotless reputation, and has always been a man who has held the confidence of the community, it is but just that until the matters are proven the public should believe the man innocent of any wrong.

A Few Facts. Being your job well along, for although we are crowded with work we can accommodate you. As to prices and quality we refer you to our former patrons and to the reputation the DISPATCH has gained for doing first-class work. We do not have to resort to the custom of adding the real price into the idea that we wish to do the work 20 per cent less than cost in order to get it. The people are not so ignorant as to believe any such thing. We do our work at a reasonable figure, considering the times, and do not beg the public to "please go and get the prices of the Tribune before coming to us so that you may get under them five cents."

The DISPATCH proposes to do, and does business on square principles. We will give you bottom prices and good work and do not require you to get other prices in order to get the benefit. A trial will convince you that our work is complete and our "artists" are well up in the business.

George Keene for City Clerk. George A. Keene has decided to be a candidate for the city clerkship at the coming election. Mr. Keene has acted in that capacity for some months, filling out R. G. Sparke's unexpired term, and has made a faithful and courteous citizen, and as this decision has been at the earnest request of a host of his friends there will be no doubt but that he will give his opponent who may feel himself called upon to try for the office a very hard run. At the present writing we are not aware that there is any one else who has decided to be a candidate.

Badly Scared. The St. Cloud Times says: A special telegram to the Pioneer Press of the 13th, indicates that the rumors of the proposed removal of the Land Office at this place to Brainerd, had some foundation. The dispatch indicates that the movement will not be successful, but, whether this intimation is truthful or is merely thrown out as a blind to keep the opposition to removal quiet until the order has been issued, is a question one person can answer as well as another. Undoubtedly there are parties in St. Cloud who can control Mr. Nelson's action in this matter. The outcome will show whether they have exercised their influence upon him for or against the removal.

A $200 Reward. The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for February, among which is the following: We will give $20 to the person telling us the longest verse in the Old Testament Scriptures by February 10th, 1885. Persons trying for the reward must send 25 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the Monthly for March, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be published, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address: RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Pa.

Is it a Crime. What if Messrs. C. F. Kindred, G. H. Hartley and D. M. Clough have gone to Washington to try and effect the removal of the St. Cloud land office to Brainerd? There is nothing criminal in the action of the gentlemen in question. It is quite natural that Messrs. Kindred, Hartley and Clough should labor to promote the interests of Brainerd.—Princeton Union.

Brainerd and the Region 'Round It. In last week's Minneapolis Speculator the following sketch of Brainerd appeared, which is given for what it is worth:

"Brainerd is a queer town. On a sandy flat, originally a pine forest, the city has been carved out of the woods."

Here and there pine stumps can be seen, and all around a wall of dark green seems to hedge in the prospect and form a boundary for Brainerd.

Tom and Jerry, whose travels we propose now to follow, go to the Pacific and the "jumping off place," found themselves in Brainerd on the 24th of last July. It was their first look at the city. The pine boughs over and around the business places and a score or more of saloons, gave token of the coming holiday.

"It is too bad," said Jerry, "that these pine stumps should have been cut from the streets. Strange that when people make settlements they first destroy all the fine native trees."

"Then after years of repentance," added Tom, "by way of apology, they plant a few sickly maples, which pine where pines would thrive."

"Here is an attempt to bring back to the hot streets the refreshing breath and color of the pine tree."

"By the way, yonder is a neat sketch, that glimpse of the railroad shops, the tall smoke stack in the middle of the wall of pines, and the heavy smoke rolling away. Wait till I sketch it."

The smoke stack is 110 feet high, the central object of the Northern Pacific shops here which cover twenty acres. There is a round house with forty-four stalls, a machine shop, with a chance to handle a score of locomotives, and with all the other shops pertaining to so large a plant."

The railroad shops made the town, and there is too much of a tendency to depend upon them. Hence, last summer, when the company was in the hands of the lumber, but much of the shops were only doing such repairs as were absolutely necessary, there was a disposition to grumble at the agency which created Brainerd, because it did not continue to sustain it. The fact is plainly apparent that Brainerd people need to do more for themselves and depend less upon the railroad. It is doing something in lumber, but much could and should be done, and in the way of diversified manufacture there is great room for improvement. Its location on the broad Mississippi, at the crossing of this great trans-continental road is all that can be desired. Brainerd, like Minneapolis, has a natural site for a city, with the least possible expense for water, sewerage, paving, etc. It only needs a diversification of industries, with pluck and perseverance, to make it one of the most pleasant and promising cities in the Northwest. Among other important interests to be developed are those of gardening, dairying and mixed farming, occupations which tend to "back up" a town and give it an air of solidity and thrift. Brainerd has a church for each thousand of its inhabitants; three fine school houses, a hospital, a jail, and other adjuncts of civilization, and a city park with pines, preserved, a big hotel and station, etc.

At present the banks of the river are not occupied by dwellings, but the time will come, no doubt, when these high and slightly banked shores will be the location of the handsome residences of the city.

Across the river is the general hospital of the Northern Pacific R. R., a large and handsome building, erected by the company for the care of any of its employees who may be sick or injured. Looking across the river to the hospital, Jerry said:

"Some one says corporations have no souls." Does that look like it?"

"Scarcely. The fact is that good corporations pay good men better and treat them better than the average employer. This is by no means a solitary instance, but the generosity of the Northern Pacific railroad. If such an establishment is established when the road is just beginning to work up a business, what may not be expected during the years to come?"

It seems as if Brainerd is in the extreme northern part of Minnesota, then, a level city, beyond it and no settlement to speak of, while south of it the Mississippi flows along by a score of rich and populous counties. Yet Brainerd is half way from South to North and about midway between Duluth and Moorhead, being therefore in the geographical center of Minnesota, that other city in the state. North, east and south-east is the region of big lakes, and timber, the land of big game, and big fish, and, eventually, of big business. There are an hundred lakes within twenty-five miles and woods with "millions in it" of the finest pine.

Resolutions of Respect. BRAINERD LODGE, No. 47, A. O. U. W. Whereas, It has pleased the Most Supreme Workman of the universe to remove from our midst our late and well beloved brother, James O. Phillips, and

ROLLER SKATING.

Notes on its Origin and Marvelous Popularity.

The past time of roller skating has become the most popular recreation of the day, and in an incredibly short space of time. Being an innocent and health producing amusement there is no cause for wonder at the remarkable and ever increasing strides it has made in popular favor. It is so thoroughly and perfectly adapted to young and old, to all members of the family, and to the weak and strong, that it would indeed have been surprising if it had not been appreciated by parents and the public generally. Like many other sports, it is such an improvement on the old-fashioned ways to be an entire novelty. The first record of the roller skate principle may be found in the French patent office, under date of November 12, 1819. Not long after this an Englishman, named Tyers, invented a skate, which he called "volots." It had five narrow wheels in a single row, so arranged that but two of them were on the floor at the same time. The next skate, so far as can be ascertained, was made in 1826, and patented in France. Twenty years this, in April, 1848, another skate was brought to the attention of the public, being first exhibited at the Paris opera. The next year one Sidmon produced a somewhat different style of roller at London. None of these, however, served to attract more than a passing notice. To an American belongs the honor of perfecting the roller skate, developing the system of rinks and giving an impetus to roller skating which has lasted to this day, and promises to last for many years to come. This gentleman, James L. Plimpton, has been well named the "father of the rink." He at the suggestion of a friend, engaged in ice skating with manifest improvement to his health, and wishing to continue the exercise bethought himself of the possibility of perfecting the roller skate, and his ingenuity soon solved the difficulty; by means of a vertical axle, with an oscillating movement, he produced a skate that could be guided at the will of the wearer by the natural inclination of the body.

A system of rings, unexceptional in character, as the majority of them are, was inaugurated and an interest excited, and a boom created in roller skating that has been irresistible. The rink fever has spread all over the land, and has become an established institution. In progressive times like these, it is a well known fact that a new invention may be discovered by which former discoveries and appliances of science and machinery may be rendered obsolete and useless, or may be so improved by practical experience, that that which was of comparative good becomes an absolute loss to the human race. In this respect roller skates are no exception, and from time to time, as this popular amusement has grown in favor, manufacturers have sprung up, with improvement on improvement.

The first public rink was opened in 1866, at Newport, and was endorsed in every way by clergymen, leading merchants and the best people of the place generally. Since then rinks innumerable have been opened throughout New England and all over the continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

This is due in a large measure that the exercise is free from vulgarity; is participated in by both sexes, is equally well adapted for young and old, and has proved without a doubt, that it is the most health giving recreation that modern science has demonstrated.

The medical faculty all over the world have not only endorsed roller skating, but highly recommended it. Dr. Cutler, of Chelsea, Mass., states that that particular exercise which brings into play the most of the muscles without any attendant counteraction of the other muscles or other functions of the body is undoubtedly the most healthy and beneficial, and this, without fear of dispute, roller skating does in an eminent degree. The whole muscular system is brought into play by the almost involuntary action of the body, and a balance of the compensatory muscles is always maintained, thus preventing any counteraction, that is so dangerous in many other modes of exercise.

Many modern authorities might be cited in favor of roller skating; suffice it to say that the whole weight of medical opinion is decidedly and emphatically in its favor, and many instances might be given of persons with failing health have regained strength and life by practicing roller skating. The improvements which have taken place in the roller skate itself, and indeed the modern inauguration of the pastime, as mentioned above, are due to a gentleman whose health was recuperated by roller skating.

Salzman, in his incompable work on exercise, says in reference to skating: "I am come to an exercise superior to anything that can be classed under the head of motion. I know nothing in gymnastics that displays equal elegance, and it excites such divine pleasure in the mind of the performer, that I should recommend skating as the most efficacious remedy to the misanthrope and hypochondriac." And so we could go on enumerating instances, where not only the medical profession and scientists endorse roller skating as the most healthful and graceful exercise for both sexes and all ages, but did our space permit we could give the endorsement of prominent clergymen all over the world, that this modern pastime is not only healthful to the body, but provides that due amount of thought and harmless recreation which every person, young or old, absolutely requires.

The Sank Center Tribune says the well water in that town is downright poison. The soil is very leachy and typhoid fever and diphtheria are both the legitimate offspring of such water.

W. F. Thompson after seven arrests, seven trials and seven acquittals on the charge of defalcation yesterday turned the tables and brought suit for $9,000 against his former employers, Farnham & Lovejoy.

The property of the late Schuyler Colfax amounts to $150,000, and it is chiefly bank stock and bonds. He made his will the day after Christmas, and leaves an estate unclouded by debts. On the day of death he was elected director of a bank at Indianapolis, in which he held $30,000 in stock.

The Judge of the Eleventh judicial district is obliged to travel 680 miles to reach his term at Hallock, Kittson county. The district is 275 miles from east to west, and the judge is so constantly on the go, it is difficult to find him when wanted. The people want the district divided.—St. Paul Dispatch.

It seems that E. H. Love was in town to confer with the leaders of the Democracy in reference to removing the Bulletin from Perham to this place and turning it into a Democratic organ. What Mr. Love decided to do was not ascertained, but like the Journal when the Telegram went into the evening field, "we welcome the direct conflict heartily and eagerly," believing that the interest of both political parties will be enhanced.—Fergus Telegram.

Gen. Anderson and Col. Clough, of the Northern Pacific railroad company, were in Ashland Monday. All work on the road between Ashland and Superior, such as surfacing and leveling the track will be temporarily suspended owing to the very cold weather. The work on the round-house and depot building will soon be finished. Trains will be started this week over the road, leaving Ashland every other day for Superior. When the road bed is thoroughly ballasted and finished a daily train will leave there for Brainerd, Minn., connecting there with the St. Paul train for the far West.

The opening of the Wisconsin Central's new line marks a new era in the development of the railroad interests of the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis. It affords them another competing line to Milwaukee and the East, besides opening up the hitherto undeveloped country of Wisconsin. It is a direct line to Milwaukee, and is the only line by which passengers to Chippewa Falls, Stevens Point, Wausau, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, can reach these cities without change of cars. The Central's equipment is first-class in every respect, their cars for the new line being built for the Milwaukee and St. Paul business expressly. Their parlor cars are models of elegance and will be made a feature of the new line. The Central's offices in Minneapolis have been located at No. 10 Nicollet house block and at No. 173 East third street, St. Paul.

Bills Introduced.

The following bills have been introduced into the legislature this week:

By Dr. Howes, of Crow Wing—Authorizing the commissioners of Crow Wing to issue bonds in $50,000 for a bridge and dam across the Mississippi river at that point. Passed under suspension of the rules.

The swamp land grants to the Winnipeg & Duluth Railroad company, now vested in the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad company, over which there was such a hot fight at the last session, culminating in the last hours of the senate after a memorable struggle bids fair to be a bone of contention again this season Mr. Sadley having introduced a bill to transfer the same to the St. Paul, Brainerd & Northwestern Railroad company.

The Wadena Bank Falls.

E. S. Case, president of the Bank of Wadena, made an assignment Tuesday evening to A. Murray, of the Merchants Bank. No inventory has yet been filed, but the liabilities are between $30,000 and $35,000. The assets are not known, but will probably be between $40,000 and $50,000, consisting largely of real estate and bills receivable. This step was forced on Mr. Case by his inability to realize on property and paper, and the losses sustained by him in the lumber business. Mr. Case has been in the banking business here for about five years, and is held in high esteem by business men of this village and part of the state, and it is expected that all or about all the liabilities will be paid. While some losses will be felt by people of Wadena, they sympathize with Mr. Case in his misfortune, believing that he has done his best to save them as well as others with whom he has had dealings, from loss.

Minnesota Clerks of Court.

The state meeting of the clerks of courts of Minnesota was called at the court house St. Paul at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There were present E. L. Winje, Montevideo; A. W. Frater, Brainerd; W. H. R. McMartin, Martineville; C. A. Johnson, St. Peter; John O. Collier, Shakopee; W. J. Wallace, Hallock; C. A. Bennett, Stillwater, and E. A. Davenport, Minneapolis. The objects of the organization is to secure a uniform method of keeping the records in the clerks' offices throughout the state. The association is to meet once every two years and discuss the best methods of conducting the business of the offices and consider such other matters as may be of interest to the clerks and the public with whom they do business. The meeting was called to order yesterday by C. A. Bennett of Stillwater. W. J. Wallace was elected chairman for the coming year and Charles A. Johnson secretary. The remainder of the session was occupied with informal discussions of the nature that the articles of association warrant. Yesterday while not in session the visiting clerks were guests of E. A. Davenport with whom they dined at the West.

Fergus in Hard Luck.

The Fergus Falls Telegrams oilcoquizes thusly: The dull season seems to have settled over Fergus like a pall. Over six months have elapsed since the fire department has been called out, and even the insurance men haven't had the enterprise to raise the rates which in no instance exceed eight per cent. The police haven't any more than earned their salt in the last thirty days and wouldn't have had a chance to earn even that if they hadn't run across a outfit the other day. Even the sheriff is said to be hard up for he has only one boarder, and hasn't had an opportunity to close up a concern for more than four months, and the prospect is far from flattering. There hasn't been a first-class robbery since September, and a divorce suit sensational or otherwise antedate our knowledge. Official corruption must be slumbering if not already dead, for it has not been seen for some time. The newspapers are at peace, and the rollicking Red river rolls along in the most quiet and unobtrusive manner with no hopes that it will beat its record and rise twenty-eight inches when the ice goes out in the spring. The excitement which the prize fight created has nearly died out and the country press are beginning to renew their faith in the moral and intellectual standing of the city. Something must happen at once or eternal despondency will settle over us.

A Legislator's Escapade

A rich sensation not yet made public occurred in St. Paul. One of the granger legislators, on economy bent, resolved to double up with some one and secure a furnished room. The prominent characteristics of the legislator are extreme piety and humility of appearance, united with a nervous sensitiveness, that often makes him do ridiculous things under excitement. He was not acquainted with the reputation of the house in which an apartment was secured, or else it is presumed he would have avoided the appearance of evil at all times. The first night of his occupancy strange words of profanity and vulgarity grated upon his ears which had not yet forgotten the heavenly tone of the pastor of the church which he is a regular attendant. Soon a rap was heard on his door; on opening it a female form in white flashed past him and entered the room. The old man was horrified, and fled into the hall without stopping to put on his clothes. Just as he reached the hall another man made a rush from an adjoining apartment, and accused the pious legislator of harboring his wife in the room. It was denied strenuously, but the more it was denied the more angry the new comer became, until from words they came to blows, and the legislator took to his heels and fled into the night with a nightshirt for an ulster. He got his clothes, though, and showed up next morning with his usual saintly manner untroubled by the horrible experience.—Minneapolis News Letter.

D. L. Kiehl, superintendent of public instruction, is arranging to visit officially the high schools of the state. It is expected that President Northrop, of the state university will accompany him.

When the bill for opposing the sale of obscene literature was read in the senate, H. P. Hall, representing his paper, was seen to turn all colors of the rainbow. Just why this is so is hard to account for.—Pioneer Press.

Judge Young, of Minneapolis, has decided that a mule is not a horse, and that the $200 state reward offered for the arrest of a horse thief cannot be claimed for the arrest of a mule thief.

An old Swede fisherman, named Larsen, was carried out into the lake on a cake of ice last Monday afternoon, at Duluth, and is supposed to be drowned, as no tidings have since been heard of him. Four or five other fishermen were seen by means of a glass outside of a wide crack in the ice, some miles out. It is supposed they are all lost.

CHAMPION BORROWERS.

"I'm going to move," said Mr. Butterwick, impatiently. "I can't stand those Tompkins next door to me any longer. They're the awful people to borrow things that I ever saw. Coffee and sugar, and butter and flour I don't mind so much; though when a woman borrows high-priced sugar and Java coffee, and sends back sand and chicken, a man naturally feels bilious and mad. But they've borrowed nearly everything in the house. First it's one thing and then it's another from morning till night, right straight along. Now there's that poker. A poker is a piece of machinery that you'd think anybody might go around and buy or, if they could not afford it, they might use a fence palling to shake up the fire. But Mrs. Tompkins seems to hanker after our poker. She borrows it fifteen or twenty times a day, and last Saturday she sent for it thirty-four times. She says that boy two dollars a week to run over and borrow that poker, and she's used it so much and so often, that it's all bent up like a corkscrew. Now take chairs for instance. She asks us to lend her our chairs three times a day, at every meal, and she borrows the rocking-chair whenever she wants to put the baby to sleep. A couple of times she sent over for a sofa, and when the boy came back with it, he said that Mrs. Tompkins was as mad as thunder, and kept growling around the house all day because there was no castors on it. Last Monday she borrowed our wash-boiler and we had to put off our washing till Tuesday. She did her preserving in it, and the consequence was, all our clothes were full of preserved peaches. I've got an undershirt that I'm mighty doubtful if I'll ever get it off, it's stuck to me so tight. Every now and then she has company and then she borrows our hired girl and all the parlor furniture. Once, because I wouldn't carry over the piano for her and take down the chandelier, she told our girl that there were rumors about town that I was a reformed pirate. Perfectly scandalous! They think nothing of sending after a couple of bedsteads or the entry carpet, and the other day Tompkins said to me: "Butterwick, does your pump-lug pull up easy?" and when I said I thought maybe it did; he said: "Well I'd like to borrow it for a few days till I can get one, for mine has all rotted away." The only wonder to me is that he didn't try to borrow the well along with it. And then on Thursday Mrs. Tompkins sent that boy over to know if Mrs. Butterwick would lend her our front door. She said their's was away being painted and she was afraid the baby would catch cold. When I asked him what he supposed we were going to do to keep comfortable without a front door, he said Mrs. Tompkins said she reckoned we might tack up a bed-quilt or something. And when I refused, the boy said that Mrs. Tompkins told him if I wouldn't send over the front door to ask Mrs. Butterwick to lend her a pair of striped stockings and a horse hair bustle, and to borrow the coal-scuttle till Monday. What in the name of Moses she is going to do with coal-scuttle and a bustle I can't conceive. But they're very extraordinary people. Last Fourth of July was it? Yes—last Fourth of July the boy come over and told Mrs. Butterwick that Mrs. Tompkins would be very much obliged if she'd lend her the twins for a few minutes. Said Mrs. Tompkins wanted 'em to suck off a new bottle-top, because it made her baby sick to taste fresh India rubber! Cheeky wasn't it? But that's her way. She don't mind it any more! Why, I have known her to take off our Johnny's pants when he's been playing over with the children, and send him home bare-legged to tell his mother she borrowed them for a pattern. And on Tompkins birthday she said that her house was so small that if we could lend her ours we might come in late in the evening and dance with the company. If we wouldn't let on that she didn't live there! Yes, sir; I'm going to move. I'd rather live next door to a lunatic asylum and have the maniacs pouring red-hot shot over the fence every hour of the day. Indeed I would."

Men and women, says Theodore Parker, and especially young people, do not know that it takes years to marry completely two hearts, even of the most loving and well-sorted. But nature is so low no sudden change. Wedlock very gradually from the cradle to the summit of life, Marriage is gradual, a fraction of us as it is a whole.

A happy wedlock is a long falling in love. I know young persons think love belongs only to brown hair and plump, round, crimson cheeks. So it does for its beginning, just as Mount Washington begins at Boston Bay. But the golden marriage is a part of love which the bridal day knows nothing of.

Youth is the tassel and silken dower of love, age is the full corn, ripe and solid in the ear. Beautiful is the morning of love with its prophetic crimson, violet, purple and gold. Its hopes of days that are to come. Beautiful also is the evening of love, with its glad remembrances, and its rainbow side turned toward heaven as well as earth.

Young people marry their opposites in temper and general character, and such a marriage is generally a good one. They do it instinctively. The young man does not say, "My black eyes require to be wed to blue, and my over-vehemence require to be a little modified with somewhat of illness and reserve." When these opposites come together to be wed, they do not know it, but each thinks the other just like himself.

Old people never marry their opposites, they marry their similars, and from calculation. Each of these two arrangements is very proper in its place. In their journey these opposites will fall out of the way a great many times, and both will charm the other back again, and by and by they will be as good as the way they will go to, and the road they will go by, and become reconciled. The man will be nobler and larger for being associated with so much humanity unlike himself, and the woman will be a nobler woman for having manhood beside her, that seeks to correct her deficiencies and supply her with what she lacks, if the diversity be not too great, and that be real piety and love in their hearts to begin with.

The old bridegroom, having a much shorter journey to make, must associate himself with one like himself. A perfect and complete marriage is, perhaps, the most perfect personal beauty. Men and women are married fractionally across a small fraction, then a large fraction.

Very few are married totally, and they only, I think, after some forty or fifty years of wedlock, and then with excitement. Such a large and sweet fruit is a complete marriage that it needs a winter to mellow and season. But a real happy marriage of love and judgment between a man and woman is one of the things so very handsome that if the sun were, as the Greeks poets fabled, a God, he might stop the world in order to feast his eyes with such a spectacle.

Questions for Husbands.

How many husbands remember, when eating their orange or banana, the first of the season, that these are choice dainties in the estimation of their wives? How many husbands forgo their cigar, their julep, their costly luxuries, that their wives may have the little pleasures that they so much desire? How many husbands complain of the toil that wears down upon them, because of the months that have to be fed. Who has the greatest toil in caring for the food, the clothes, the washing and the other things that are repeated each day, and of which a man knows comparatively nothing? The truth of the matter is, that the mother does nine-tenths of the toil that concerns a child, that is, most mothers do.—Will Fuentes in Indianapolis Herald.

Hugo's Faith.

Arsene Houssaye reproduces in L'Artiste a profession of faith recently made by Victor Hugo after a dinner at his house. "What is death but eternal life?" said the poet. "I call to witness these millions of worlds, what is there? Infinity, always infinity. If I pronounce the name of God I raise a smile on the faces of some of you who do not believe in God? Why do they smile? Because? Because they believe in the living forces of nature. But what is nature? Without God it is a grain of sand. With God it is a similar personal entity and a grave. But just as the cradle is the beginning, the tomb has its rays of light; it is a door closed upon the earth but opened upon worlds of which we catch a glimpse. Let to the invisible, Messieurs les savants, let us also believe in the invisible. Science will always be wrong if it is not dominated by a radiant ideal."

The Patriarch of Simmons' Gap.

An old gentleman residing in Simmons' gap, in Georgia, has about as good a right to an extension of domesticity as any man since the days of King Augustus II. of Poland. This happy man, who has attained the patriarchal age of four score years, and has the supreme felicity of being married nine times, and is the ninth wife who is at present solacing—one can't say his declining years, because there is no knowing what the potentialities of a man who has displayed such hardihood—but who is, at any rate, the present mistress at Simmons' gap. Nor in view of his age, and the fact that he has been well and extremely endowed. Fifty-three persons are entitled to call him "papa," and at a recent family gathering over three hundreds of his descendants were present.

The Legislature has been asked to vote $1,000 to O. L. Clyde of Little Falls, who while acting as Lieutenant of Company K, of the Second regiment of the State National Guards, was blinded in one eye and otherwise injured by a premature discharge of a cannon during the sham battle at the annual encampment at New Ulm in July, 1883.

The salary of the president's private secretary is $3,250. Colonel Lamont in his search for a house in Washington could find none suitable for less than $3,200. He is considering what disposition he can best make of what will be left of the $50 balance, after paying for the support of his family for a year.

An alarm of fire at the new school house called the department out in a hurry on Friday afternoon. The cause of alarm was from some rubbish in the furnace room that had caught on fire but was put out without damage.

The journalistic fraternity was invited out to a possum supper at Wm. Martin's on Saturday evening of last week. This was something of a rarity and was enjoyed by the participants. The cooking was done in very artistic shape.

It is stated this morning that Tom Hartley has bought out his partner, Harry Gross, in the grocery business.

The Kate Castleton troupe showed to very good houses on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The company is a good one although it verges considerably on the variety plan.

W. H. Leland has purchased the partial interest of Frank L. Crocker in the Sixth street rink at Minneapolis, and is therefore now sole proprietor and manager. Mr. Leland is a gentleman who has gained many friends since his coming to this city. He had previously had twelve years' successful business experience in Brainerd and Montana. He is a possessor of ample means, and intends to merit by his management of the rink a liberal and increasing public patronage. Mr. Crocker will now confine his attention to the manufacture and sale of his patent skates.—Minneapolis Spectator.

W. D. Thomas, the dining car conductor of the Northern Pacific, who was injured on the morning of the 9th inst., died Friday morning at the Sanitarium. Mr. Thomas, it will be remembered, was conductor of the car returned last week at Bedford. Mr. Thomas was one of the most popular dining car conductors on the Northern Pacific and had been with the company since the first dining car was put on the road. He leaves a widow and two children. The remains were taken to St. Paul and the funeral took place Saturday. The funeral was under the charge of the Northern Pacific Beneficial association, of which the deceased was a member.

The three mile race at the roller rink on Tuesday night between four young ladies of this city brought out a large crowd who anxiously waited until the time should arrive for the trial of speed. At 9 o'clock the floor was cleared of skaters and the ladies who were to race were arranged in line and started off at the word "go". Miss Emma Weber had evidently made up her mind to "get to the front" if such a thing was possible, and accordingly when the word was given she made a bold dash and succeeded in getting the lead, which she kept during the entire race, making the three miles in thirteen minutes. Her sister Miss Ella Weber was close behind, but by a mistake she fell when the race was nearly ended, thus losing a half-lap.

The Castleton troupe which played here this week had a little run at Winnipeg, where he was followed by the following telegram which appeared in the dailies on Monday: "The performance of Kate Castleton's company in the opera house here last night was interrupted by an outbreak on the part of Harry Phillips, Kate's husband and the manager. He obtained possession of the money sent from San Francisco and got drunk. At the close of the first act Kate asked him for the remainder of the money. He responded by felling her with a blow which rendered her insensible for some time. At the hotel afterwards he broke into her room, revolver in hand threatening to kill her. He was arrested and spent the night in the police station. Seven thousand dollars worth of Miss Castleton's diamonds were found on his person and returned to her. Phillips was bailed out and the whole company left to-night."

A dispatch from Fergus Falls on Wednesday says: "Kate Castleton played here last night to a large house. This morning before departing for Brainerd she made a division of the cash on hand between herself and husband and told him to go his way and she and the company would go theirs. The husband failed to see matters in that light and refused to go. A compromise between the two was eventually made and the separation did not take place. This was the culmination of the fuss that started at Winnipeg."

The A. C. C.
The ladies of the A. C. C. met as previously announced at the residence of Mrs. H. H. Barber for their second dinner. To say that it was a very enjoyable affair but poorly expressed the good time that all seemed to have. It was apparent from the first that it would be even more of a success than the previous dinner, because each one knew their duties better and all appeared in uniform which added greatly to the harmony of the affair. Mrs. Farnham and Mrs. Kindred waited on the table while the other members partook of the dinner, and afterwards they were waited upon by all the ladies present. The bill of fare was as follows: Soup.....Mrs. H. H. Barber Fish.....Mrs. Farnham Fried Chicken.....Mrs. H. H. Barber Chicken Salad.....Mrs. Mabel White Cold Slaw.....Mrs. C. E. Smith Potatoes.....Mrs. Smith Tea and Coffee.....Mrs. G. Hartley Cream and sugar.....Miss Aggie Mulrine Butter.....Mrs. E. H. Smith Pudding.....Mrs. J. L. Smith Cake.....Mrs. C. F. Kindred Bread.....Mrs. G. E. Rosser Cookies.....Mrs. A. V. Snyder

The next meeting will be a tea at Mrs. C. E. Smith's on Fourth street north, on Wednesday, February 4th.

Mrs. C. F. KINDRED, Secretary and Treasurer.

An Interesting Case.
On Monday and Tuesday the preliminary examination of W. C. Cattell on the charge of obtaining the signature of C. B. Slater to a note of $500 by false representations was in progress before Judge Douglas. W. A. Fleming appeared for the defense, and Col. Sleeper for the prosecution. After hearing the case Mr. Douglas concluded that there was sufficient cause to bind him to the next trial. The grand jury fixed his bond at $500, which he was unable to procure that evening and he was compelled to spend the night with Sheriff Mertz. The next day, Thursday, however, the following named gentlemen signed the bond and he was liberated: Douglas, C. B. King, George Forsyth, C. G. Rosser, S. Walker, Dan Smith, C. C. Byrnes, Geo. Holland and S. P. Fleming.

Until sometime in the fall Mr. Cattell held the position of freight agent at this point and has heretofore borne a good name and the case has attracted considerable attention. Since this matter has been made public many other things have been brought to the surface and have been the subject of much discussion, which, if true, will make a bad showing against the gentleman in question, but inasmuch as he has heretofore had a spotless reputation and has been a man who has held the confidence of the people, it is but just that until the matters are proven the public should believe the man innocent of any wrong.

A Few Facts.
Bring your job work along, for although we are crowded with work we can accommodate you. As to prices and quality we refer you to our former patrons and to the reputation the Dispatch has gained for doing first-class work. We do not have to resort to the custom of deluding the dear public into the idea that we will do the work 20 per cent less than cost in order to get it. The people are not so ignorant as to believe any such thing. We do our work at a reasonable figure, considering the times, and do not beg the public to "please go and get the prices of the Tribune before coming to us, so that we may get under them five cents." The DISPATCH proposes to do, and does business on square principles. We will give you bottom prices and good service and do not require you to get other prices in order to get the benefit. A trial will convince you that our stock is complete and our "artists" are well up in the business.

Ceprae Keene for City Clerk.
George A. Keene has decided to be a candidate for the city clerkship at the coming election. Mr. Keene has acted in that capacity for some months, filling out R. G. Sparks' unexpired term, and has made a faithful and courteous official, and as this decision has been at the earnest request of a host of his friends there will be no doubt but that he will give his opponent who may feel himself called upon to try for the office a very hard run. At the present writing we are not aware that there is any one else who has decided to be a candidate.

Badly Scared.
The St. Cloud Times says: A special telegram to the Pioneer Press of the 15th, indicates that the rumors of the proposed removal of the Land Office at this place to Brainerd had some foundation. The dispatch indicates that the movement will be successful, but, whether this intimation is truthful or is merely thrown out as a blind to keep the opposition to removal quiet until the order has been issued, is a question one person can answer as well as another. Undoubtedly there are parties in St. Cloud who are opposed to Mr. Nelson's action in this matter. The outcome will show whether they have exercised their influence upon him for or against the removal.

A $20 Bible Reward.
The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for February, among which are the following: We will give $20 to the person telling the longest verse in the Old Testament. Scriptural for February 10th, 1885. Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) for their answer, for which they will receive the Monthly for March, in which the name and address of the winner will be published, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address: RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Pa.

Is it a Crime.
What if Messrs. C. F. Kindred, G. G. Hartley and D. M. Clough have gone to Washington to try and effect the removal of the St. Cloud land office to Brainerd? There is nothing criminal in the action of the gentlemen in question. It is quite natural that Messrs. Kindred, Hartley and Clough should labor to promote the interests of Brainerd—Princeton Union.

Brainerd and the Region 'Round It.
In last week's Minneapolis Spectator the following sketch of Brainerd appeared, which is given for what it is worth:
"Brainerd is a queer town. On a sandy flat, originally a pine forest, the city has been carved out of the woods.
Here and there pine stumps can be seen, and all around a wall of dark green seems to hedge in the city and form a boundary for Brainerd.
Tom and Jerry, whose travels we propose now to follow to the Pacific and the 'jumping off place,' found themselves in Brainerd on the 3d of July. It was their first look at the city. The pine boughs over and around the business places and a score or more of saloons, gave token of the coming holiday.
"It is too bad," said Jerry, "that these pine should have been cut from the streets. Strange that when people make settlements they first destroy all the fine native trees."
"Then after years of repentance," added Tom, "by way of apology, they plant a few sickly humped which pine where pines would thrive."
"Here is an attempt to bring back to the hot streets the refreshing breath and color of the pine tree."
"By the way, yonder is a neat sketch of the pine forest, the tall smoke stacks in the niche of the wall of pines, and the heavy smoke rolling away. Wait till I sketch it."
The smoke stack is 110 feet high, the central object of the Northern Pacific shops here which cover twenty acres. It is a round house with forty-four stalls, a machine shop, with a chance to build a score of locomotives at once, with all the other shops pertaining to so large a plant. The railroad shops made the town, and there is too much of a tendency to depend upon them. Hence, last summer, when the company was retrenching, many of the stalls filled with "lame horses," and the shops were only doing such repairs as were absolutely necessary, there was a disposition to grumble at the agency which created Brainerd, because it did not continue to sustain it. The fact is plainly apparent that Brainerd people need to do more for themselves and depend less upon the railroad. It is doing something in lumber, but much could and should be done, and in the way of diversified manufacture there is great room for improvement. The location on the broad Mississippi, at the crossing of this great trans-continental road is all that can be desired. Brainerd, like Minneapolis, has a natural site for a city, with the least possible expense for water, sewerage, paving, etc. It only needs a diversified industries, with pluck and perseverance, and it will be the most pleasant and promising cities in the Northwest. Among other important interests to be developed are those of gardening, dairying and mixed farming, occupations which tend to "back up" a town and give it an air of solidity and thrift. Brainerd has a church for each thousand of its inhabitants; three fine school houses, the court house, jail, and other adjuncts of civilization, a ten-acre park with pines, preserved, a big hotel and station, etc.

At present the banks of the river are not covered by buildings, but the time will come, no doubt, when these high and mighty banks will be selected as the location of the handsome residences of the city.

Across the river is the general hospital of the Northern Pacific R. R., a large and handsome building, erected by the company for the sick and injured employees who may be sick or injured. Looking across the river to the hospital, Jerry said:
"Some one says corporations have no souls." Does that look like it?"

Scarcely the fact is that good corporations pay good men better and treat them better than the average employer. This is by no means a solitary instance of the generosity of the Northern Pacific railroad. If such an establishment is established when the road is just beginning to work up a business, that may not be expected during the years to come.

It seems as if Brainerd in the extreme northern part of Minnesota, there being no city beyond it, and no settlement to speak of, while south of it the Mississippi flows along by a score of rich and populous counties. Yet Brainerd is half way from South to North and about midway between Duluth and Moorhead, being therefore nearer the geographical center of Minnesota than any other city in the state. North, east and south-east is the region of big lakes, and timber, the land of big game, and the fish, and, eventually, of big business. There are an hundred lakes within twenty-five miles and woods with "millions in it" of the finest pine.

Resolutions of Respect.
BRAINERD LODGE, No. 47, A. O. U. W.
Whereas, It has pleased the Most Supreme Workman of the universe to remove from our midst our late and well beloved brother, James O. Phillips, and
Whereas, it is but just and right that a fitting recognition of his many virtues should be had, therefore be it
Resolved, By Brainerd Lodge No. 47, A. O. U. W., of the State of Minnesota, that while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for our brother that has been taken from South to North, and that in the death of our beloved brother James O. Phillips, this lodge laments the loss of a brother who was ever ready to proffer the hand of aid and the voice of sympathy to us all; he was a brother and friend who was dear to all kindred affectionate husband and father, an upright citizen, whose noble life was a standard to his brothers.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the records of the lodge, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased and to each of the newspapers in Brainerd.

ROLLER SKATING.
Notes on its Origin and Marvelous Popularity.
The past time of roller skating has become the most popular recreation of the day, and in an incredibly short space of time, being an innocent and health producing amusement there is no cause for wonder at the remarkable and ever increasing strides it has made in popular favor. It is so thoroughly and perfectly adapted to young and old, to all members of the family, and to the weak and strong, that it would indeed have been surprising if it had not been appreciated by parents and the public generally. Like many other sports, it is such an improvement on the old fashioned ways to be an entire novelty. The first record of the roller skate patent may be found in the French patent office, under date of November 12, 1819. Not long after this an Englishman, named Tiers, invented a skate, which he called "volots." It had five narrow wheels in a single row, so arranged that but two of them were on the floor at the same time. The next skate, so far as can be ascertained, was made in 1828, and patented in France. Twenty years this, in April, 1848, another skate was brought to the attention of the public, being first exhibited at the Paris opera. The next year one Sidmon produced a somewhat different style of roller at London. None of these, however, served to attract more than a passing notice. To an American belongs the honor of perfecting the roller skate, developing the system of rinks and giving an impetus to roller skating which has lasted to this day, and promises to last for many years to come. This gentleman, James L. Plimpton, has been well named the "father of the rink." He at the suggestion of a friend, engaged in ice skating with manifest improvement to his health, and wishing to continue the exercise bethought himself of the possibility of perfecting the roller skate, and his ingenuity soon solved the difficulty; by means of a vertical axle, with an oscillating movement, he produced a skate that could be guided at the will of the wearer by the natural inclination of the body.

A system of rings, unexceptional in character, as the majority of them are, was inaugurated and an interest excited, and a boom created in roller skating that has been irresistible. The rink fever has spread all over the land, and has become an established institution.

In progressive times like these, it is a well known fact that a new invention may be discovered by which former discoveries and appliances of science and machinery may be rendered obsolete and useless, or may be so improved by practical experience, that that which was of comparative good becomes an absolute loss to the human race. In this respect roller skates are no exception, and from time to time, as this popular amusement has grown in favor, manufacturers have sprung up, with improvement on improvement.

The first public rink was opened in 1866, at Newport, and was endorsed in every way by clergymen, lending merchants and the best people of the place generally. Since then rinks innumerable have been opened throughout New England and all over the continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

This is due in a large measure that the exercise is free from vulgarity; is participated in by both sexes, is equally well adapted for young and old, and has proved without a doubt, that it is the most health giving recreation that modern science has demonstrated.

The medical faculty all over the world have not only endorsed roller skating, but highly recommended it. Dr. Cutler, of Chelsea, Mass., states that that particular exercise which brings into play the most of the muscles without any attendant counteraction of the other muscles or other functions of the body is undoubtedly the most healthy and beneficial, and this, without fear of dispute, roller skating does in an eminent degree. The whole muscular system is brought into play by the almost involuntary action of the body, and a balance of the compensatory muscles is always maintained, thus preventing any contraction, that is so dangerous in many other modes of exercise.

Many modern authorities might be cited in favor of roller skating; suffice it to say that the whole weight of medical opinion is decidedly and emphatically in its favor, and many instances might be given of persons with failing health have regained strength and life by practicing roller skating. The improvements which have taken place in the roller skate itself, and indeed the modern inauguration of the pastime, as mentioned above, are due to a gentleman whose health was recuperated by roller skating.

Salzman, in his incomparable work on exercise, says in reference to skating: "I am come to an exercise superior to anything that can be classed under the head of motion. I know nothing in gymnastics that displays equal elegance, and it excites such divine pleasure in the mind of the performer, that I should recommend skating as the most efficacious remedy to the misanthrope and hypochondriac." And so we could go on enumerating instances, where not only the medical profession and scientists endorse roller skating as the most healthful and graceful exercise for both sexes and all ages, but did our space permit we could give the endorsement of prominent clergymen all over the world, that this modern pastime is not only healthful to the body, but provides that due amount of thought and harmless recreation which every person, young or old, absolutely requires.
